CELEBRATING 35 YEARS

A Letter from the Executive Director

AIDS Project of the East Bay (APEB) celebrated 35 years of service in Alameda County in 2018. The year included some difficult decisions and strategic planning of our work beyond this anniversary. We dedicated time to reviewing the agency's programs, finances, and community impact, and sent a team from APEB to New York City to learn from community-based organizations there who have transformed their service models and positioned themselves for long-term sustainability. In 2018, APEB made the difficult decision to end all medical case management and psychosocial support services funded by the Ryan White Program. Eliminating those services and associated staff positions has allowed the agency to consolidate all remaining services to its centrally-located East Oakland space, thus reducing our annual overhead by over $250k.

The HIV/AIDS crisis is still a State of Emergency in Alameda County because of the high incidence of infection among African Americans. To address this crisis, APEB continues to provide rapid and confidential HIV and Hepatitis-C testing, education, and linkage-to-care services, pre-exposure prophylaxis (PrEP) navigation, substance abuse prevention and sexual health education services for young people, housing case management for people living with HIV, and targeted case management services for clients enrolled in the California AIDS Medi-Cal Waiver Program.

Much has been accomplished over the last 35 years. The HIV epidemic has changed, and APEB has evolved along with it. We are not the same agency we were in 1983! As we look past APEB's 35th anniversary and towards an end to the HIV epidemic in Alameda County, we will use what we have learned to help our organization continue to respond to change, introduce innovation, and transform for the future. APEB has positioned itself for the future, and, with your support, APEB will continue to work towards reducing HIV incidence in Alameda County - specifically among black men who have sex with men, and transgender women of color - by increasing access to culturally-appropriate health care for these key populations and helping to reduce HIV-related health disparities in our community.

The struggle continues...
